The Adarsha Janapremi School arranged a trip for grade eight students to Mudkhu Bhanjyang. They enjoyed its scenic natural beauty and studied about many plants and flowers. Next day, students who were unable to attend the trip asked some questions to the leader of visiting group Sunita.

Sulav : How was Mudkhu Bhanjyang? Tell us something charismatic about it.

Sunita: Mudkhu Bhanjyang is an exotic and naturally beautiful place settled at the top of the hill and surrounded by beautiful substantial jungle. The view tower of here is quite famous. You can spot many mountains, including Gaurisankar, a lot of hills, villages and full view of the valley from that view tower. As it is on top of the hill so the climate is always cool and refreshing. Many birds and animals found on the side of the hill.

Jyoti: How was village and people of it?

Sunita: That's an interesting question. Well, most of the houses were made of concrete and bricks as it is a well-developed village but some were made of stones and mixtures of soils. The village is well managed and clean. The people of the village were nice and manner full. Most people are engaged in agriculture while some have their own business like food shops, hotels, and fancy shops.

Niraj: I have heard that Mudkhu Bhanjyang is a quite famous and lots of people go there for a picnic and tour, is that appropriate ?

Sunita: That's proper. Mudkhu Bhanjyang's elegance and great views and plants entice many people who go there to enjoy views and picnic. Picnics are often correlated with festivals and are a long-standing culture in Nepal. Exclusively on Saturday, huge groups of people cluster there to cookouts and enjoy. Picnics have been part of the social harmony for decades. People enjoy participating in singing, dancing, eating and other amusing events at picnics.

Pradip: Sounds fascinating, how can we reach there from Bhaktapur?

Sunita: Mudkhu Bhanjyang is located at Jitpurphedi, Kathmandu. It's roughly 30 kilometers from here. You can take a private car or taxi and also public vehicle's route is available so you can take one to get there.
